

10 APPENDIX VI: GANDERLAND NINEVAH AND THE NINE-HOLE GOLF COURSE

A fascinating snippet of Downley Common's history, kindly provided by John Meakes.

The plan shows the location of the nine-hole golf-course at a time when there was still a dell where the sports-ground is now, and when the Common as a whole was much less wooded and more open. Those wonderful names - Ganderland and Ninevah. Another era. How much better than "Downley Common North and South". I wish I'd known about these sooner:
